Seabirds Paradise

Teuri Island

Teuri Island is located 28 km west of Haboro Port. It is a "Seabird's Paradise" and home to an endangered species of Oloron birds (guillemots) and Rhinoceros Auklets. It's a precious island where seabirds and humans live in harmony.

Please tour this fabulous island and let the local nature tantalize your senses.

About 800,000 Rhinoceros Auklets birds dance and fly in the world's largest breeding ground.

Rhinoceros Auklets are a type of murrelet that are found around the North Atlantic, their breeding season is the only time they live on land. They show up on Teuri Island from mid-March, and breed in nest holes located in the cliffs. Watching birds fly home in the sunset is spectacular, and the sight of black-tailed gulls pouncing on fish to give to their chicks is also impressive. They disappear in mid- to late July when their chicks leave the nest.

Seabird Observatory ②

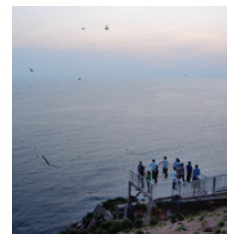

You can observe a tremendous number of black-tailed gulls and spectacled guillemots nesting at this sheer cliff on the west coast of Teuri Island.

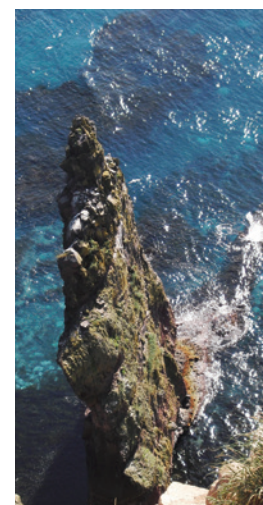

Parenting seabirds can be seen in early summer

Akaiwa Observatory ③

Teuri Island is the breeding ground for a number of Oloron birds (guillemots) . Akaiwa is the symbol of the island. It is a 48m vertical rock that sits upright from the sea. You can observe seabirds up close from this observatory. There are many holes that Rhinoceros Auklets have dug around the slopes. They form the world's largest colony of about 800,000 birds. During the breeding season in May-July, you can observe Rhinoceros Auklets swimming around and getting food to take home to their young.

Let's see cute sheep Suffolk Sheep Farm 1

The landscape of the central part of the island closely resembles that of Scotland, here you can find Suffolk sheep grazing leisurely in the ocean breeze. The sheep grow up in a stress-free environment so the lamb meat is the highest quality.

Valuable cultural examples of combined Japanese and Western architecture styles.

Yagishiri Historical Museum 4

This historical house was built in 1900 and originally used to be a Kimono and dry goods store. It has also served as a post office and telegraph station. It is a valuable cultural asset showing the footsteps of Japan's predecessors. Its layout is the same today as the time it was built and it contains an exhibition of tools and articles used in that time.

Suffolk sheep are the one and only brand that luxury restaurants in Ginza appreciate.

They grow freely, eating grass full of minerals derived from the sea breeze in a stress-free paradise without any predators. The high quality is supported by a rich natural environment. One reason many luxury establishments support this product is the natural raising and breeding methods that are used.

Event

Yagishiri Suffolk Sheep Festival 2018

This is an event where you can taste the fabulous sheep meat that is produced only in small numbers, on Yagishiri island.
